Practicing physical assessment, such as observation, palpation, percussion, auscultation and so on, is required for students in medical and nursing schools. Many kinds of simulators are developed to improve physical assessment skills, along with many kinds of simulation methods that are trying to introduce in the field of education.

Topics include but are not limited to:

- Developing new simulation or virtual systems
- Strategies to introduce new simulation or vestural systems
- Evaluation of simulation or virtual systems
- Experience of using new simulation or vestural systems
- Determining new directions for simulation
