IoTCH: Internet of Things for Cultural Heritage

Chair and Coordinator

Prof. Dr. Fernando J. García-Diego, Department of Applied Physics, Universitat Politècnica de València, Spain fjgarcid@upv.es

along with

SENSORCOMM 2020, The Fourteenth International Conference on Sensor Technologies and Applications November 21, 2020 to November 25, 2020 - Valencia, Spain http://www.iaria.org/conferences2020/SENSORCOMM20.html

Internet of Things (IoT) technologies can facilitate the preventive conservation of Cultural Heritage (CH) by enabling the management of data collected from physics deterioration parameters. To achieve this objective, novel works should be proposed on data acquisition (frequency and location of sensors), downloading of this data in the cloud, statistical analysis and interpretation of the data with current regulations and recommendations in this regard and incorporating these to specific degradation models.

Authors are invited to submit complete unpublished papers, which are not under review in any other conference or journal in the following topics, but not limited to:

- Sensors for cultural heritage, design, situation, frequency data logging;
- Data analysis;
- Cloud computing;
- Degradations models for cultural heritage.
