

Dr. Olga Levina

Olga received the diploma degree (Diplom, an equivalent of the Master's degree) in industrial engineering and management from Technical University of Berlin, Germany. She received her PhD in information systems from Technical University of Berlin.

As a PostDoc researcher and project manager FZI Research Center for Computer Science in Berlin her research focus was on digital business processes, digital platforms, mobility, and ethics of digitization.

She is currently professor for business process management at the Brandenburg University of Applied Sciences (TH Brandenburg) and an active member in several commissions on ethical design and use of machine learning technologies.

olga.levina@th-brandenburg.de